Druse religious judge assassinated in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A man pretending to seek legal advice walked into the apartment of Lebanon's top Druse religious judge and assassinated him with a silenced pistol yesterday. The army, fearing revenge killings, clamped a curfew on Beirut and warned that citizens carrying arms would be shot. Druse gunmen hammered Lebanese army positions south of Beirut after the assassination and snipers killed a French peacekeeping soldier near the line separating Moslem west and Christian east Beirut. But a truce held in Tripoli between loyalists and rebels in the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In Washington, President Reagan and Lebanese President Amin Gemayel yesterday repeated their call for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon.

Reagan said in a statement as Gemayel left for home that the two leaders "stand by the May 17 agreement as the best and most viable basis for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon."

He also appealed to "other external forces" to leave as well, an obvious reference to Syria.

THE DRUSE judge, 60-year-old Sheik Halim Takieddine, was a political moderate and was killed exactly one year after Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and his wife were wounded in car bombing just one block from Takieddine's west Beirut home.

There was no claim of responsibility for Takieddine's murder.

But at a news conference in Damascus, Jumblatt blamed the killing on the Druse's rightist Christian rivals, whom he claimed were operating in west Beirut under the cover of Lebanese authorities.

The Lebanese army command ordered a curfew on Beirut as of 5 p.m., and warned that violators would be arrested. They also said any citizen caught carrying a weapon would be shot and that people found hiding unauthorized arms would be "severely punished."

Murders of Druse leaders have in the past been followed by vengeance killings. In 1977, Walid Jumblatt's father, Druse leader Kamal Jumblatt, was assassinated near his mountain village of Moukhtara. Subsequently, about 200 Christians in nearby villages were killed.

POLICE SAID Takieddine's assailant contacted his victim by telephone yesterday morning requesting an appointment for a legal problem. When the man arrived at the first-floor apartment in the Sanayea district of west Beirut, he was let in by Takieddine's 13-year-old maid.

After the maid returned from preparing coffee, she found Takieddine lying dead on the floor with blood streaming from his head and neck, police said.

Review of state laws ordered

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Without referring to the controversial $60,000 agreement involving Gov. Richard Celeste and Lt. Gov. Myrl Shoemaker, the Ohio Ethics Commission yesterday ordered a staff review of state laws governing supplemental salary payments to public officials.

The six-member, nonpartisan commission disclosed the study at the conclusion of its regular meeting.

"The Ohio Ethics Commission directed its staff to review Ohio statutes and procedures relating to the supplemental salary funding of public officials," the panel said.

"The staff is to report its findings to the commission at its next meeting."

"The commission recognizes its responsibility under Section 102.06 of the Revised (Ohio) Code to recommend legislation and render advisory opinions relating to ethics, conflicts of interest and financial disclosure," the commission said.

The ethics commission's action followed disclosure of an agreement between Celeste and Shoemaker in which $60,000 in campaign funds is to be channeled to the lieutenant governor over a four-year period.

The agreement, written in December 1982, provides for Shoemaker to be paid $15,000 annually for four years for services to the campaign as a consultant.

Both officials have denied that the money is a supplement for Shoemaker's salary.

He earns $35,000 from the state annually as lieutenant governor but also serves - without pay - as natural resources director. That cabinet level post normally carries a salary of about $50,000.

Payment of the consulting fees was listed in a campaign finance report filed by Celeste's campaign committee last Friday.

Commissioners, who under law review pending complaints and investigations in closed-door sessions, are next scheduled to meet Jan. 12.

University installs new computers

by Nancy Beach
staff reporter

Editor's note: This is the first of a two-part series on the University's computing systems.

The University is currently reinforcing its academic computing capabilities and making plans for the future to improve computing systems, according to Dr. Richard Eakin, vice president of planning and budgeting.

Richard Conrad, director of computer services, says that currently about 4,500 students are using computers. Also, over 25 percent of faculty and graduate students are using computers, and the University has quadrupled its academic computing capacity.

Eakin, who is head of the Task Force on Computing organized this fall, said the purpose of the task force is to look into the University's computer needs and formulate policies that will help direct purchases of new equipment in the future.

One topic that has been discussed is if and how microcomputers should be purchased for use by faculty and students. Some universities, such as Carnegie-Mellon, are now requiring that students purchase their own microcomputers for classwork.

THIS GIVES each student an opportunity to use a computer and means he does not have to wait for computer time, but Conrad said he does not think the University will require students to buy computers.

"Since this is a state institution, I don't see how they could require students to buy their own computers," Conrad said. "If that were the case, then we would have to have some sort of financial aid to help students to buy them."

Conrad said it was more practical for the University to buy computers and put them in stations where they can be shared. He pointed out that another problem with requiring students to purchase personal computers is that the system will probably become obsolete by the time the student leaves the University and he probably will not want to keep it.

He said the number of Apple computers has been increased from 23 to 47. There are 15 in the main control station in the Union and four dorms on campus each have eight.

THE UNIVERSITY has also ordered IBM personal computers, and

River channelization could harm BG water

by Marcy Grande
staff reporter

Editor's note: This is the second of a two-part series on the future of Bowling Green's water.

Despite University students' criticism that Bowling Green's water tastes bad, plant operators maintain that the water is treated and purified to meet Environmental Protection Agency standards, according to Kip Brown, chief operator of the wastewater treatment plant on the corner of Poe and Dunbridge roads.

But in the future, Biology professor Dr. Karl Schurr said he believes the water quality will be affected if two significant river systems are channelized.

Currently, these river systems under petition to be channelized are the Tiffin River system and the Maumee headwaters. In addition, the Little Auglaize River system, west of Lima, is already undergoing channelization, a process Schurr predicts "will ruin the quality of the drinking water in the summer months by causing the rivers to dry up and turn scummy."

Schurr said these three river systems contributed to a great majority of the flow of the Maumee River, which supplies water to Bowling Green. But with the channelization of the Little Auglaize a few years ago, one-third of that source has been cut off.

Providing a means of water drainage for flood plains that could otherwise be used more efficiently for growing crops is the usual purpose of channelization. But there are many disadvantages, according to Schurr.

THE PROCESS may involve clearing brush, sandbars and other obstructions from a natural river system, cutting down trees beside it and widening the stream.

But when a stream is widened, it becomes more shallow, and summer weather causes it to occasionally dry up. In wet weather, heavy precipitation causes overflow of shallow streams resulting in flooding instigated by speeded water runoff, Schurr said.

Another danger of channelization is for pollution to be carried out in floods from high water, thus contaminating water wells.

Schurr cited the example of the Little Auglaize river system, much of which has been channelized. "In the summertime there are literally dry sections of the Little Auglaize where kids ride their motorcycles through and kick up the dust."

And in other channelized streams, heavy water goes over the banks and floods property downstream on its way to Lake Erie," he said.

Schurr said the Auglaize is ruined, so one-third of the water sources is already wiped out. The petitions threaten the other two significant water sources.

Schurr fears if the petitions are approved and these other river systems are to be channelized, they will reduce the flow of the Maumee to the point of endangering the water supply.

With the curtailed functions of these three significant river systems, "Bowling Green's water supply would be destroyed during periods of dry weather," Schurr predicted.

Students insured?

Bill aids interns

by Joe Phelan

The Ohio Assembly passed a bill Wednesday which will provide liability insurance for the state's university college students who are required to participate in student teaching or field work with the public.

The bill passed the House 85-1 and the Senate unanimously and should reach the governor's office by next week, according to House Rep. Mike Stinziano, D-Columbus, who sponsored the bill.

The bill would protect students in education, medical, dental, veterinary, nursing, optometry, social work and journalism fields in law suits.

The bill would allow the board of trustees of each state university to identify the best plan to insure its students. The limits, and types of coverage, eligibility requirements and other details would be worked out by each college, he said.

"Each of the 12 (state universities) is different," Stinziano said. "The legislature can't sit in Columbus and make decisions as to one plan."

Until the bill becomes law, students have only their own accident insurance and can be held personally liable to be sued. Stinziano said the bill was introduced at the request of Ohio State University's administration in response to problems.

The bill would take effect 90 days after it receives the governor's signature. Stinziano said the universities would probably start to make the coverage available during the next school year.

"I believe every university will take advantage of it," Stinziano said.

Police think link found in assaults

A sexual assault that occurred Wednesday evening has prompted University officers to question whether two other previous assaults on campus are related to it, Dean Gerkens, associate director of Public Safety, said yesterday.

University police said they detect possible links with similar reported incidents that occurred on the evenings of Sept. 26 in the cemetery and Nov. 9 near the Tech Building and the greenhouse.

The assault occurred on the corner of Ridge Street and North College Road about 6:45 p.m. and involved a University woman who was seized at knifepoint.

The assailant forced the woman to walk to the tennis court area near the Technology Building and College Park, where she was knocked to the ground and sexually attacked, according to police reports.

Gerkens said she fought off her assailant, escaped uninjured to her home and reported the incident around 8 p.m.

The victim described the assailant as a 6-foot tall, thin built white male in his 20s, who wore a long dark coat and a dark stocking cap.

Sports pass holders get USG attention

Just as we were wondering if Undergraduate Student Government hadn't already closed up its office and called it a semester, the group came out of the woodwork and solved an important situation for students.

Because of the huge demand for admission to the Bowling Green/Ohio State hockey game Saturday night, the University announced it would offer a closed circuit viewing of the match in Anderson Arena.

Tickets for the event were priced at $3 for adults, $2 for students, and $1 for All-Sports Pass holders. While the viewing is a service to students, we and a number of other University students were upset that the sports pass holders were being charged for tickets.

By paying $20 at the beginning of the year, sports pass holders are entitled to free admission to all regular season sports including hockey games as tickets are available.

Students are admitted free to the live game so many of them were rightfully upset then when they learned they would have to pay a dollar to see the game on a big television screen.

Jack Gregory, athletic director, said the department decided to charge students with passes because the screening was a special event and sports passes do not cover special events - only regular season home games.

Hearing numerous complaints about the situation, USG went to work to get the situation changed. As a result of their efforts and efforts on the part of the Athletic Department, the price for All-Sports Pass holders was eliminated.

We appreciate the Athletic Department's position that the closed circuit presentation is a special event. At the same time, we think the USG position was justified. We commend USG for their quick reaction to the situation. Their impromptu meetings and early morning discussions with athletic officials have allowed student voices to be heard and be effective.

Space weapons will escalate nukes

by Kevin Prendergast

Once again, the world's two superpowers are embarking on a military build-up which they claim will further the cause of deterrence and make the world a safer place to live in. But once again, these plans will only lead to further expense while making our world more paranoid.

At best, the military situation between the United States and the Soviet Union can be described as a shaky stand-off. With thousands of missiles already pointed at each other and more being deployed around the world, the idea of security seems remote. But instead of taking serious steps to remedy the present situation, both nations have decided to move the race out of this world and into space, towards a much more complex "star wars" scenario.

Ever since his star wars speech, delivered March 23, the president has embarked on a military build-up that is, in essence, "out of this world." The Air Force has begun testing space weaponry and many predict the first batch to be operational within this decade.

Without inflation and ultimate over-run costs calculated, the price tag for these programs range from $50 billion to $500 billion, twice the present military budget. In a time when budget deficits are soaring out of control, while the president refuses to deal with, or even at times acknowledge that deficit, the cost for the average American is substantial. Higher taxes will become imperative to pay for the systems and the deficit will continue to grow.

The result will also be substantial cuts in other government programs and reductions of present conventional military programs. Yet the administration presses on.

Proponents for the president's plan claim that these weapons will further deter the Soviet threat. They claim that by sending billions of dollars worth of military hardware into space, we will once again gain superiority and security.

But that argument sounds much like the one advanced in the early 1950s when both superpowers began escalating the production of atomic and nuclear weapons. Throughout the arms race, Americans were bombarded with the idea that if we kept producing weapons, world security would one day be attained.

But in an age where films like "The Day After" are viewed with so much fear and seriousness, one must question how secure Americans actually feel. In an age where policy makers refer to the destruction of mankind as often and as easily as they refer to the Gross National Product and the poverty level, one should question how secure our world is.

In fact, our world is no more secure than it was when the arms race began. The two superpowers have geared their resources to create an unstable environment which threatens to destroy all of mankind. We can't move that instability into space.

Moving into space can only further complicate the problem by threatening to further destabilize this planet while furthering the margin for human error. The complex technical equipment involved only increases the risk of an accidental miscalculation which could wipe out millions.

The United States and the Soviet Union must begin now to discuss the banishment of all space weaponry before the problem grows like the nuclear monster we have already constructed. Serious negotiation is the only way.

The stakes are high, both economically and morally, and few can afford the bet. The problem still can be harnessed and controlled before the costs grow higher. The overriding question now facing us is: Should we build these weapons simply because we are capable of it or are we mature enough to stop molding every scientific principal we discover into a weapon? Space seems to be where the answer to this question lies.

When nobody blinked

by Art Buchwald

I want to apologize for being so late with my think piece about the TV film "The Day After," but I've been thinking so much about it I haven't had time to do anything else.

ABC, which produced the picture, went out of its way not to take sides as to who was responsible for trashing Lawrence, Kan. They spent $7 million showing us what could happen after an area was mushroomed, but not one buck on what caused the holocaust in the first place.

I think they owed us just one scene between a few survivors discussing the why of it all.

The scene could have taken place between Jason Robards, who played the role of a doctor, and the last political science professor alive at the University of Kansas.

The men, covered from head to foot in atomic ash, are sitting on a pile of rubble that was once a nursery school.

"What the hell do you think happened?" Jason Robards asks the political science professor.

"Nobody blinked," The professor replies.

"What does that mean?"

"Well, it all goes back to the Cuban Missile Crisis. Remember when Dean Rusk said the Soviets and the United States came eyeball to eyeball, and the Russians blinked first? Ever since then our foreign policy was based on the premise that the Soviets would always blink before we did."

Robards says, "I guess we miscalculated."

The professor, looking over the desolation, says, "That would be a fair statement. What the people in Washington refused to take into account was the Soviets considered the missile crisis the biggest defeat they suffered since World War II. They booted out Khrushchev and vowed they would never blink again."

"Do you want an orange?"

"No, for some reason I feel nauseated. In order not to blink, the Soviets started an unprecedented nuclear arms buildup. Soon, the military on both sides insisted the other side had nuclear superiority, so the arms race was on. The thinking in Washington and Moscow was the more deterrents they had, the less chance there was of someone starting a war."

"Why didn't it work?" Jason says.

"It worked for a while. But then the arms talks came, and both sides engaged in playing the numbers game. We promised not to put any cruise and Pershing missiles in Europe if the Soviets reduced the SS-20s. The Soviets said we had to include British and French missiles in the talks, and we refused. When neither side would blink, we started deploying our new missiles, and the Russians walked out of Geneva."

"Why the hurry?"

"Because our credibility was at stake. Had we not gone ahead with the threat, the Soviets would have said Reagan blinked. If they hadn't walked out, we would have said Andropov blinked."

"And that's when the missile race began in earnest?"

"You could say that. They surrounded us with all their nuclear warheads and we surrounded them. We got ourselves in a spot where any spark could set off Armageddon."

"Didn't both sides realize this?"

"The leaders were assured by their experts that the other side didn't have the guts to use their nukes because they knew they would also be wiped out in the process. The only way to keep the peace was to build more horrifying weapons until the other side came to its senses."

"So why are we sitting on the rubble in Lawrence, Kan., full of gamma rays?"

"I guess we'll never know," the professor says sadly. "It might not even have been a human decision. With a response time of only six minutes to react, the whole thing could have been started by a faulty computer that wouldn't stop blinking."

The 700 Club poses falsely as journalism

by Vic Oberhaus

Everybody trusts journalists. TV journalists like Walter Cronkite, Dan Rather and Tom Brokaw are especially easy to trust. You see them on the tube five or six nights a week, they tell you what's happening in the world and they do it calmly, accurately and without glamour. There's a simple kind of power in their job. TV journalists know millions of people watch them every night and register every word they say, almost without a question.

Then the inevitable happened. Someone found a use for all that power of unquestioning faith. A group of people found they could call themselves "TV journalists" and give themselves heaps of credibility, where they had little before.

"The 700 Club" claims to be "TV journalism with a different spirit" and promises more than "Johnny, Merv, Phil, Mike or Morley." They have spirit, but it's not always the spirit of objectivity. Most of the time they're harmless in their goody-two-shoes manner of inspirational reporting, but occasionally they tromp all over professional ethics.

Take, for example, a recent episode that gave rock and roll music the run-through-the-mud treatment. Though I agreed with some of their comments, it bothered me that they blended reporting and commentary together in a neat package for their viewers. Instead of dropping about their lack of professionalism, I'll let host Pat Robertson muddy his own credibility as a journalist.

Commenting on the cover photo of an "Adam and the Ants" album, Robertson said, "This apparently is a group. He's got makeup on (the man on the cover) and nail polish, red nail polish, and apparently you might say he's in drag, whether you might say they're homosexuals, I don't know, but it certainly looks that way."

When asked by one of his co-hosts if he thought kids took the lyrics to rock and roll music seriously, Robertson said, "The drugs and sex area, of course they do. How much premarital sex are we having these days? How much dropping of acid? Or we have the Beatles, Tijuana Gold, trippin' through the grass, 'Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds' about LSD, and on and on and on. They were just sellin' that as hard as they could. The Beatles were stoned out of their minds a good part of the time they were singin' around."

During a conversation about the drawings and other artwork on album covers which brought up witchcraft and demonology, Robertson said, "When you look back in the culture of Third World countries you can find cultures that are separated by two and 300 years, by thousands of miles with no possibility of interconnection, you'll find the same art, these same devil-heads in China that you'll find in Africa, for example, which indicates that there is a satanic undercurrent that has affected our culture and this is coming out in this kind of stuff (rock and roll music)."

Commenting on rock and roll music and its influence, Robertson said, "As somebody said, it's four words: drugs, money, sex and rebellion, and that just seems to tie into satanism."

As a religious/inspirational program "The 700 Club" is top-notch. But if the commentators are going to call themselves journalists they should emphasize objective and factual reporting and leave the preaching to Jerry Falwell.

Vic Oberhaus is a junior journalism major from Liberty Center, Ohio.

Deputy Perkins fan happy officer got award

I wonder how many people were so pleased as I was to see Deputy Perkins receive a medal for bravery on Monday's "Sheriff Lobo Show?" It's about time that man got his due reward. Week in, week out, he puts his own life at risk to protect the good citizens of Orly. In my opinion the program should be re-named The Deputy Perkins Show; this man is star material!

Onslaught of partials has student frustrated

It's that season again - the time of year when long white envelopes fill the on-campus mailboxes, and crowds of students gather around amidst the sounds of sighs of relief and groans of disappointment. Sound familiar? You guessed it - partial schedule time again!

I for one am sick and tired of receiving the "dreaded partial schedule!" This is the second semester of my junior year, and I can safely say that I have read the: "You have received a partial schedule - Do not panic!" notice faithfully ever semester since my freshman year!

Some things never change!! The schedule's always enclosed with a "do not panic" note, and it's always the same classes I'm closed out of - those in my major (RTVF communications). It's reached the point that I'm tempted not to even bother registering for them - I know what the outcome will be. I've been on countless waiting lists in my day, only to be informed that: "there just isn't enough space," or: "If only one more student had dropped you would have been in." Frustrating to say the least!!

What do you do when a smiling prof tells you: "Well honey it looks like you'll be sticking around an extra year?" Forget the honey sir - this school isn't sponging an extra year's out-of-state tuition from me.

It's kind of disillusioning to hear a group of sophomores talking about a course you've been closed out for two years... especially when you are a junior! Is there no method to this madness?!? RTVF Department get a clue!

'What-ifs' can be used positively with Kennedy

After reading Mr. Di Vincenzo's editorial ("Kennedy Erred in Vietnam, Nov. 30), I felt compelled to comment. It's not that I question the validity of your statements - I believe in the facts. However, I do question your reasoning behind writing this article.

In reference to another recent editorial in the News, it was written that we are not a country that lives by "what ifs" concerning the destiny of Americans and the world "if" John F. Kennedy had lived. Yet, you undeniably ponder the hypothetical situation that "if Kennedy was alive today, the nightmare of Vietnam virtually would rest on his shoulders alone. Can you honestly believe that's true anyway?"

It's so easy to reflect and criticize, 20 years later, and to make suggestions as to what Kennedy could have done to make him a better president. The fact is that maybe he should have, could have, and would have done a lot more. But let's think about that too. Maybe Kennedy did much more in terms of fulfilling the presidency than any other individual could ever possibly do amidst the early 60s. Consider that maybe he was a man with ideas with the knowledge and capabilities to fulfill those ideas into reality in such a way that he modernized Americans at a faster pace than was ever before imaginable. You see, Mr. Di Vincenzo, "what ifs" can be made in terms of the positive as well. But we are not a country that lives by hypotheticals...

Music's aural skills deafened?

Program in danger of extinction

by Mark Di Vincenzo
staff reporter

Editor's note: The students who agreed to be interviewed for this story asked not to be identified.

Several University music students said they think the Music Department's aural skills program is one of the best in the nation. But with the dismissal of the program's originator, Dr. Andras Szentkiralyi, an associate professor of music, the program is in jeopardy of extinction here.

Dr. Lura Jafran Jones, the chair of the Music Composition Department, was unavailable for comment.

Aural skills is a type of ear training to hear musical intervals, and according to several music students, "it (aural skills) is the most important class any music student can take because it trains you to properly listen for the (musical) notes. It is essential for survival in music."

Szentkiralyi used an aural skills program called the Kodaly method. This method, which grouped two students together, was first used by children in Hungary and was adapted to college music students by Szentkiralyi.

His (Szentkiralyi's) program is designed to work as a natural progression, step by step, going from very simple to very advanced, a student who was taught with the Kodaly method said. "It's (aural skills) a real skill. Singing or playing instruments comes naturally, like second nature, when you have mastered aural skills."

SENTKIRALYI IS appealing his dismissal and is now going through a grievance process. If he loses his appeal, he will finish out the 1983-84 school year. Until then, the freshman classes he usually teaches have been taken away from him and the students are now being taught aural skills with computers to do the work Szentkiralyi once did. Dr. Ruth Inglefield is assisting the students by conducting drills on the computers.

Szentkiralyi said earlier that aural skills cannot be taught on computers, and he added that learning aural skills on computers would be "as difficult as learning how to play the violin by pushing computer buttons."

Students who have been taught with the Kodaly method said the computers do not emit an overtone, which is like a "sympathetic note" or an echo. "Real music has overtones, computers do not," the students said. "You use your own voice with Szentkiralyi's system. With the computer, you're working with computer beats."

Inglefield said she chose not to comment because the case is still under consideration.

THE FRESHMEN students who are taking the aural skills class with the computers said the program is set up where they are loaded up with information and then are expected to refine it. That process repeats itself again and again.

"It's like giving a third grader War and Peace and then asking them to write a book report on it," one freshman music student said.

Students from Indiana University, University of Michigan and Florida State University, which have good aural skills programs, told some University music students that the University's aural skills program is better.

"Our program is also so unique, because it is Szentkiralyi's program," the students said. "It is the only one of its kind, and that makes us more marketable and more in demand."

The students said they thought the dismissal of Szentkiralyi and his aural skills program would hurt the College of Music and the entire University.

"I'm worried about my education," one freshman music student said. "When I'm teaching in a few years, I don't want a student to ask me a question that I won't be able to answer because I don't know my aural skills."

A petition has been signed by nearly 150 music students who support Szentkiralyi and his aural skills program.

they are now being installed in the Union. These computers will replace the obsolete keypunch machines, and Conrad said 43 have been ordered. Thirty-five to 40 of them have been received.

The DEC 2060 system, which has been upgraded from 2050, is located in the Math Science Building and is devoted almost entirely to academic use. It is the most powerful computer to be found on campus, and Conrad said it can now accommodate 60 to 70 students at the same time.

This summer, Conrad said the old IBM 370 Model 158 computer in the Administration Building was replaced with an IBM 4341 Model 02, which is 50 to 60 percent more powerful than the old model. About 55 percent of the IBM's work is devoted to academic purposes. It has twice as much memory as the old model, and can process more data at the same time. Conrad said the system can be upgraded by adding more disk capacity, which increases memory, or by adding tape drives, which enable the computer to process more data at once.

ANOTHER COMPUTER, a VAX 780, has been put in the Math Science Building, and Conrad said that system will be devoted to academic research. It is almost as powerful as the 4341, and will be available for use when some testing has been completed.

However, the University is behind other universities in the area of graphics capabilities, according to Eakin, and the need for such capabilities was pointed out in a presentation given to the Task Force.

"Sometimes it is better to be able to visually present something than to talk about it," Eakin said, using as an example lessons in mathematics explaining changes in geometric forms.

A new organization has formed on campus with the intent of promoting the responsible use of alcohol and increasing alcohol awareness.

The name of the group is BACCHUS, which stands for Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students.

BACCHUS, a national organization, was founded at the University of Florida in 1976. The Bowling Green chapter was started last year by Terry Appolonia, assistant director of Small Group Housing and Greek Life.

"There is a great deal of freedom for a college student, and attitudes concerning alcohol can become misdirected," he said. "The purpose of BACCHUS is not meant to be prohibitive, but rather to promote the responsible use of alcohol."

A task force consisting of graduate students and other concerned individuals has been formed to aid University students in establishing a BACCHUS chapter.

According to Laurie Bouck, Dunbar hall manager, "the purpose of the task force is to lay the groundwork for the group in general and to promote the philosophy of BACCHUS."

"WE ARE PROMOTING responsible drinking, but we also want to show students that there are alternatives for those who choose not to drink," she said.

Charlotte Patton, chairperson of the task force, hopes BACCHUS will provide alcohol planning for all organizations on campus.

"There is a need to coordinate alcohol programming and we hope that BACCHUS will become the central place for all programming," Patton said.

According to Fayette Paulson, assistant dean of students, Residence Life is supportive of the effort being made by the chapter and will cooperate to ensure its success.

"BACCHUS is a very influential group and it has made a good impact on most campuses where it has formed," she said.

But, Bouck said, "the success of BACCHUS depends on the amount of student involvement."

Agencies promise rights abuse reports

WASHINGTON (AP) - Five private agencies yesterday promised to prepare their own report on human rights abuses in El Salvador, after President Reagan vetoed a bill that would have required Salvadoran political and social reforms as a condition of U.S. military aid.

At the same time, leading Democrats denounced Reagan's veto as likely to encourage right-wing death squads in El Salvador which recently have intensified killing of civilians regarded as politically suspect. The Democrats said they would resubmit the vetoed bill when Congress reconvenes Jan. 23.

The bill would have revived a two-year-old law that required Reagan to cut off military aid to the rightist Salvadoran government if he could not certify every six months that it was making progress on human rights and political and economic reforms. The next report would have been due Jan. 18.

Meanwhile, five anti-Sandinista groups told the United States they are prepared to end military operations against Nicaragua if that nation takes "credible steps" toward democracy.

A senior American official said yesterday. The official, reporting on talks yesterday in Panama City between the anti-Sandinista leaders and Richard Stone, Reagan's special Central American envoy, said his report was intended to convey a message directly to Sandinista leaders in Managua.

The official spoke on condition he not be identified.

THE AMERICAN Civil Liberties Union and Americas Watch, a private human rights group, contend Salvadoran security forces and related paramilitary groups are responsible for the majority of the 40,000 civilian deaths during the four-year-old civil war in El Salvador.

Morton Halperin of the ACLU said his group and the others would prepare a report by late January on the requirements listed in the bill and urge Congress to cut off the $84 million in military aid this year if the Salvadoran government is found violating them.

Joining the action were the Lawyers Committee for International Human Rights, which represents the families of four American churchwomen slain in December 1980, allegedly by Salvadoran soldiers; the Washington Office on Latin America and the Commission on U.S.-Central American Relations, Halperin said.

Reagan killed the certification bill Wednesday night by withholding his signature when the mid-night deadline passed for signing the measure. Because Congress is adjourned, the legislation dies under what is called a "pocket veto."

Unemployment cure: 1 million new jobs

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - The State Development Department says the cure for Ohio's unemployment woes is simple: generate a million new jobs by 1990, and the unemployment rate will drop to about 4 percent.

But development officials admit that effecting the cure will be more difficult than writing the prescription - particularly considering that Ohio managed to create an average of only 50,000 new jobs a year from 1950 to 1980, when the state's manufacturing economy was healthier than it is today.

To reach its goal, the state would have to create 125,000 new jobs each year from 1982, when Gov. Richard Celeste took office, until 1990.

"Obviously, the disparity between 50,000 and 125,000 is rather great," David Berger, assistant deputy director of energy for the department admitted. "It wasn't put out as saying that's what we will achieve. If you will, it's a goal."

Berger and other Development Department officials have been promoting the department line in speeches around the state. Last month, Berger visited a Small-Business Conference in Marietta to tell business people they "represent the bulk of where the new jobs will come from."

"No longer is manufacturing supplying the bulk of new jobs," he said. "Instead, jobs are much more service-oriented today. Small business fits directly into that picture."

LATER, Berger explained he was trying to tell the business people in Marietta that the state has their interests at heart.

Democrats often were critical of the administration of four-term Republican Gov. James Rhodes for what they considered Rhodes' interest in attracting new industries to the state rather than working to bolster existing businesses.

Draft resister freed, awaits hearing

ALLIANCE, Ohio (AP) - Mark Schmucker, a Menonite student convicted of refusing to register for the draft is free - at least for now - and awaiting a ride home from the mentally retarded center in Missouri where he has served his sentence.

A week ago, the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned Schmucker's October 1982 conviction.

The three-judge panel sent the case back to federal court in Cleveland for an evidentiary hearing Schmucker had requested.

Anna Belle Schmucker said she and her husband plan to pick up their 22-year-old son "within a week." Mrs. Schmucker said she wouldn't reveal when they would return to their Alliance home because Mark wanted his homecoming to be private.

After he returns to Ohio, Schmucker must post a $2,000 bond pending a hearing on his claim of selective prosecution by the government.

Schmucker, a senior at Goshen College in Indiana when convicted, could have received five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Judge Ann Aldrich ordered him to work for two years at the Missouri home instead.

Falcon icers to face Bucks

by Jean Dimeo
sports reporter

This weekend's series against top-ranked Ohio State marks the first meeting this season of Bowling Green's hockey Falcons and the Buckeyes. This critical series against the two Central Collegiate Hockey Association rivals could decide who sits atop the national and CCHA rankings after this weekend.

The Falcons will face the Buckeyes in the OSU Ice Arena Friday night, and will host OSU in the BG Ice Arena Saturday night. Both games start at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday's game is sold out, and the game will be shown on closed circuit TV in Anderson Arena.

"This weekend will be a challenge to see who is the best," BG head coach Jerry York said. "Ohio State has a fine team and the highlight of the weekend will be playing them in their arena and in ours."

After last weekend's sweep over Miami in the Ice Arena, the Falcons have notched a 13-1 overall record, and remain ranked third nationally, according to the WMPL-radio coaches poll.

OSU is second in CCHA standings with a 9-1 record, one-half game behind league-leading OSU.

An unexpected 4-3 loss to Miami Tuesday night in Oxford erased the Buckeyes' unbeaten record at 13 games. Miami broke its 13-game losing streak with the win.

The Buckeyes are now 13-1 overall, and 10-1 in the CCHA.

This weekend's series marks the 65th and 66th meetings of the Falcons and Buckeyes since the 1969-1970 season. OSU won last year's series, 2-1-1, but BG holds the edge in the intra-state rivalry, 40-23-1.

Last year, the Buckeyes tied for second with Michigan State in the CCHA with a 21-7-4 record, and were eliminated in the CCHA playoffs by MSU in the quarter finals.

The BG icers last win in the OSU Ice Rink was during the 1981-82 season, when BG swept the series with identical 5-2 scores.

The Buckeyes remain atop of the national standings because of their potent offense and steady defense. The Pooley brothers, Paul and Perry, lead the Buckeye offense with 41 and 33 points, respectively.

THE POOLEY'S are also first and second in scoring in the CCHA (league games only), and Paul Pooley is tied with Western Michigan's Dan Dorion for the league's longest scoring streak at 14 games.

OSU's offense has been explosive, scoring 68 of its 89 goals in 11 CCHA games. In addition, OSU has the top scoring line in the nation of Paul Pooley, Dave Kobryn and Andy Browne.

OSU has seen fine goaltending this season with John Dougan in the net. After Tuesday's loss, Dougan is still ranked second in the CCHA with a 2.26 goals against average and an 8-1 record.

BG's Gary Kruzich is ranked third behind Dougan with a 2.01 GAA and a 6-1 record after last Saturday's win against Miami.

York said Kruzich will start in goal Friday night, and Saturday night's goaltender will not be selected until that morning.

Notice to All-Sports Pass holders

Student holders of BGSU All Sports Passes will be admitted free to Saturday night's closed circuit telecast of the Bowling Green-Ohio State hockey game to be telecast at 7:30 p.m. in Anderson Arena.

The telecast viewing will be limited to 1,500 persons in order to provide optimal viewing of the nine-foot by 12-foot screen.

All Sports Passes that have been punched for a ticket to the game in the Ice Arena will not be valid for admittance.

Students and youth without All Sports Passes may still purchase tickets at the Memorial Hall Ticket Office daily from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Tickets will also be on sale at the gate.

The doors to Anderson Arena will open at 6:30 and will be closed when 1,500 people have entered the arena.

Green Sheet

Vol. XVI, No. 8

Bowling Green State University

December 2, 1983

Kafka comes alive in readers theater

"Franz Kafka: Story Teller for Today," a Readers Theater production commemorating the 100th anniversary of this multifaceted writer, will be presented at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday in the Joe E. Brown Theater, University Hall.

Tickets, priced at $1.50, will go on sale at 7 p.m. on performance nights. There are no advanced sales and no reserved seats.

Though Kafka is "seldom done," according to director Lois Cheney, a professor in the School of Speech Communication, he is -- nonetheless -- a major literary figure whose works continue to affect writers today.

"Kafka is a complex writer, and this is an opportunity to make him clear," Cheney added.

While Kafka died in 1924, his writings continue to evoke ideas and concerns which are appropriate for today, Cheney said, adding, "He writes about the meaninglessness in the world, seeing the absurdity of everyday jobs. He is concerned about people being treated like they are not humans, not full individuals, but functionaries."

The landmarks of his stories and vignettes tease the listener and lead him down twisted corridors -- the conventional becomes the unconventional, haunting images ring surprisingly true to life, and humor is both simplistic and dark, she said.

"Franz Kafka: Story Teller for Today" will present a number of his shorter pieces, including excerpts from "Blumfeld an Elderly Bachelor," "The Castle," and his especially well known "Metamorphosis."

The five-member cast includes freshman Cherie Brewster, sophomore Matt Miller, juniors Michael D'Agostine and Timothy Smith, and senior Andy Cline.

Commencement set for Dec. 22

Commencement exercises will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday (Dec. 22) in Memorial Hall. University President Paul J. Olscamp will preside over the ceremonies and Richard Edwards, the vice president for University relations, will be the commencement speaker.

Candidates for graduation should assemble at 9:15 a.m. in the Business Administration Building. Signs indicating the various degrees will be posted, and students should assemble by college.

No tickets are required to attend the ceremony.

Graduates can now order caps and gowns through the University Bookstore. They will be available in the Forum of the Student Services Building the week before and the morning of commencement.

Additional information about graduation can be obtained by contacting the Registrar's Office, first floor of the Administration Building.

Holidays 'light up'

One of the oldest University traditions -- the annual tree lighting ceremony -- will herald in the holiday season on Wednesday (Dec. 7) in front of the Union.

Scheduled to begin at 6 p.m., this year's ceremony includes a speech by University President Paul Olscamp and a selection of holiday songs performed by the Men's and Women's choruses.

At approximately 6:30 p.m. the switch will be thrown to light the holiday tree. Immediately after the festivities, coffee, hot chocolate and cookies will be served in the Commuter Center, basement of Moseley. All of the holiday activities are free and open to the public.

'Sgt. Dietrich' tickets remain

Good seats still remain for Sunday (Dec. 4) night's concert featuring comedian Steve Landesberg. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom of the Union.

Tickets, priced at $5, are now on sale at the Union Ticket Office. The office will be open until 5 p.m. Friday (Dec. 2). It will also be open beginning at 5 p.m. the day of the show.

Opening for Landesberg will be Cleveland comedian and musician Charlie Wiener.

Landesberg, who is perhaps better known as the erudite detective Arthur Dietrich on the Emmy-Award-winning television series "Barney Miller," is in the midst of a nationwide collegiate tour which will eventually take home to more than 50 colleges and universities.

After spending several years working in small nightclubs around the country, Landesberg got his "big break" in December 1971 when he was invited to appear on "The Johnny Carson Show." That appearance paved the way for other television guest shots and acting assignments.

In 1974, he landed the role as the Viennese violinist on the Paul Sand show, "Friends and Lovers." Although the show lasted only one season, it was long enough to catch the eye of Danny Arnold, the creator of "Barney Miller."

Since "Barney Miller," Landesberg has had a number of television appearances, including the hosting of his own network special, appropriately titled "The Steve Landesberg Television Show."

The concert is being sponsored by the University Activities Organization.

WSA plans annual evening in Europe

"A One Night Stand in Europe" is the theme for the World Student Association's annual European night to be held from 8-11 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 9) at St. Thomas More Parish, 425 Thurston. All events are free and open to the public.

The evening will feature ethnic food and entertainment with more than 50 University students from 14 European nations involved in the project.

The evening is designed to familiarize Americans with the European culture and give them the chance to sample foreign foods, view an "arm chair" slide-show trip through Europe and even participate in some European customs.

Folk dancers from such various countries as France, Germany, Spain and Austria will demonstrate their moves with audience participation encouraged. A Christmas carol sing-a-long led by the University's Spanish, French, and German clubs, will also require the audience to join in.

The highlight of the evening will be a performance by the professional American duo "The Michael Gomez Band." The duo will be performing several ethnic works from various European countries as well as American favorites by Harry Chapin and Fleetwood Mac.

Green Sheet is published by the Bowling Green State University Office of Public Relations for students, faculty and staff. It is produced in cooperation with The BG News.

This issue is the last one for the fall semester. The first issue of spring semester will be published Jan. 20. The deadline to submit information for that issue will be noon Wednesday, Jan. 18.

All events must be submitted in writing to the Green Sheet editor, 806 Administration Building. There is no charge to have an item listed.

Junior Steve Cotten is feature editor; senior Radell Roberts is serving as calendar editor.

Musical Arts presents:

Philharmonia in concert

British conductor David Pickett will return to Bowling Green to lead the University Philharmonia in its final concert of the fall semester at 8 p.m. Sunday (Dec. 11) in Kobacker Hall, Moore Musical Arts Center.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Pickett, who recently became director of recording arts and associate professor of music at Indiana University, has worked with a number of internationally known artists, including Leonard Bernstein, Aaron Copeland and Placido Domingo, while a recording engineer at the Abbey Road Studio of EMI in London from 1969 through 1978.

From 1974 until accepting his present assignment, Pickett was the artistic director of "Music on the Heath" and musical director and principal conductor of the Bushey Symphony Orchestra, one of England's leading community theaters.

Also appearing on the program will be professor Ivan Hannord, who will be the featured soloist in the Baughn Williams' "Tuba Concerto."

The evening will also include performances of "Cinderella Suite" by Prokofiev and "Daphnis and Chloe" by Ravel.

Electronic music

The third annual Northwest Ohio Electronic Music Concert will be presented at 8 p.m. Monday (Dec. 5) in Bryan Recital Hall, Moore Musical Arts Center.

The program will feature music created mostly from electronic synthesizers and is free and open to the public.

Works composed and arranged by the students and faculty of BGSU, the University of Toledo, and Heidelberg College will be performed.

University professor Burton Beerman's composition "A Gospel Sermon" and student, Helen Williamson's "The Seven Churches of Revelations" will be included in the annual event.

Michigan opera auditions

The Michigan Opera Theatre of Detroit will hold auditions for student internships on Jan. 21 in the Moore Musical Arts Center.

Auditions, scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. in Kobacker Hall, will be for students interested in both performing and technical internships. Positions available include accompanists, stage technicians, stage managers, administrative assistants, costume, wig and make-up artists.

All candidates are requested to bring a current resume and recent photograph to the auditions. Those applying for performance internships should prepare three arias.

Additional information and appointments can be obtained by contacting David Rogers, chair of the performance studies department. The deadline to apply is Jan. 14.

Freshmen to display talent

"Love My Music," taken from the popular song by Kenny Loggins and Jim Messina, is the theme for the annual Freshmen Follies production to be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday (Dec. 14-17) in Joe E. Brown Theater, University Hall.

Tickets, priced at $1.50, will be available beginning at 7 p.m. each evening at the box office located outside the theater.

Freshmen Follies is produced each year with a cast composed exclusively of freshmen class members. Included in this year's musical revue are songs which showcase the music itself and the artists who create them. A wide array of music will be featured including humorous pieces, pop music, country music and songs from Broadway shows.

"Freshman Follies is not a talent show," says Patrick McCarty, a junior IPCO major and musical director of the show. "It is produced for the purpose of getting freshmen involved and having a good time."

The show's cast consists of 18 freshmen with senior IPCO major Steve Hinger serving as stage director.

French House plans informational activities

French culture is always available on the University campus at La Maison Francaise (The French House), but entertainment will especially predominate during Monte Carlo night, beginning at 8 p.m. Saturday (Dec. 3). All activities are free and open to all.

Entertainment featured will include French songs performed by French graduate student Jay Moore, Can-Can dancing by house residents, and fortune-telling by resident "gypsies."

For the more competitive student, roulette, blackjack, poker, and various other games will be available. Students will accumulate tokens as winnings, which can then be traded in for prizes, including a dinner certificate to Sundance, passes to Uptown, free pizzas and t-shirts.

Food and beer will be sold. Proceeds will benefit the house's scholarship fund, which supports at least one University student on the Academic Year in France Program.

In addition to enjoyment, the evening of entertainment will serve as an opportunity to introduce students to the French House. The goal of the living arrangement is to promote French language and culture, specifically through French activities, lectures, parties, and conversation.

Cabaret auditions set

Auditions for the 1984 edition of UAO Cabaret will be held from 7-11 p.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 6). Sign-ups for various audition times within these hours can be made until 5 p.m. Monday (Dec. 5) at the UAO office on the third floor of the Union.

Any University student with an interest in music and dance is eligible to try-out for the production which will be presented Feb. 1-3.

Students auditioning for Cabaret should bring comfortable clothing (jeans and tennis shoes) and be prepared to sing one verse and chorus from any song that best demonstrates their range. A pianist will be provided for the audition which also consists of a group dance, warm-ups, and script readings.

The cast of Cabaret, directed by University students Larry Harris and Jennifer Reitzel, will consist of six men and five women. There will be five main characters and six supporting characters performing totally original music that the directors have developed. Each character must be well-rounded and able to dance, sing and speak.

SRC planning a birthday party

The Student Recreation Center will celebrate its fifth birthday from 8-11 p.m. January 19 with a reception and open house in the club pool area.

All past SRC employees as well as the University community are invited to sample birthday cake, punch and a bit of the facility's past with a historical slide show. Terry Parsons, director of the SRC, will be the featured speaker and emcee for the evening.

Student handbook ready

The Student Organization Directory, a listing of more than 150 student organizations, is now available to students, faculty and staff. Copies can be obtained at the Office of Student Organizations and New Student Programs, 405 Student Services.

The directory lists the purpose of each group and its officers or advisor and their address or telephone number.

Playboy Celebration

From The Closet To The Coffee Table In 30 Years

CHICAGO (AP) — First came the bunny. The failed cartoonist. And the sex symbol.

The year was 1953. A war in Korea was ending. A new peace at home was beginning. And Hugh Hefner was preparing to start a revolution against buttoned-down America.

He called it Playboy, an entertainment magazine for upscale men featuring words and wit, clothes and causes, and most of all women — bare bottoms, bottoms and all.

It shocked. It scandalized. Preachers denounced it. Theologians debated it. And the public bough it — even though they often hid it.

Now, as Playboy celebrates its 30th anniversary with its December issue, the magazine has long since moved out of the closet and onto the coffee table.

In three decades, Hefner's brainchild — started with less than $7,000 — now sells 4.25 million copies a month, according to the Audit Bureau of Circulations. That volume brought in $122 million in fiscal 1983.

The Playboy empire, run by Hefner's daughter Christie, includes the magazine, also published in nine foreign countries; a cable channel, video cassettes, private clubs, licensed products and more than 1,500 employees.

"We were once a rebel," Nat Lehrman, Playboy's associate publisher said. "Now we're part of the establishment."

Playboy's rise to the "establishment" has been reflected by the contributions of famous writers — William Buckley, Norman Mailer, Gore Vidal, Isaac Bashevis Singer and others — to the magazine's pages.

World leaders from Fidel Castro to Jimmy Carter to Lech Walesa have revealed their private thoughts in interviews.

And thousands of women — beginning with Marilyn Monroe, the first centerfold, in December 1953 — have revealed just about everything else.

That picture of Monroe curled up on a red satin backdrop came at a time when nudity was considered naughty and the stuff of peek-a-boo "girlie" calendars and barbershop walls.

In fact, Monroe's picture was a calendar shot bought from a Chicago company by Hefner, who once dreamed of becoming a cartoonist. For the first year, Playboy's "Unpinned Pinups" were standard calendar shots.

The now-ubiquitous Playboy "bunny" logo, however, was an original, dreamed up in a few hours in 1953 by Arthur Paul, then Playboy's art director.

And so was the Playboy philosophy, an editorial credo about sex and individual rights developed by Hefner and printed in 25 installments beginning in the magazine in 1962.

Years before that, in 1955, Hefner introduced another concept — nude photos of women who could easily be regarded as the girl next door.

He featured Playboy's subscription manager, Janet Pilgrim, the only woman to appear as a centerfold three times. She recalls that Hefner allowed her to bring her first test photos home to show to her mother.

Since then, Playboy's Playmate centerfolds — for which women are paid $15,000 — have evolved into features of pouting, sultry women sprawled nude on silk sheets in softly lighted boudoirs.

Even Pilgrim — the name is a pseudonym — says she isn't sure she would pose these days. "You're talking about the difference between semi-nude and total nudity, which is something I don't know I could do today," she said.

Even with total nudity, Playboy's centerfolds — chosen by Hefner — now seem almost tame in comparison to the graphic, gynecological details shown in other men's magazines.

"People no longer regard it as a source of outrage and scandal," Bernard Beck, sociology professor at Northwestern University, said. "It's been outflanked in the extremes by other publications."

Those at Playboy say they never intended to compete in the erotic wars, though they concede the raunchier magazines cut into their readership, which was nearly 7 million at its peak in the early 1970s.

"We created the conditions for our own competition," Lehrman said.

"We made it possible for a host of others to come around and take business from us."

Still, Playboy's ability to move up the ladder of respectability has been rewarding, too. Advertising, which was scarce in the early days, grew and peaked in 1977, Lehrman said. But some major American corporations — such as General Motors — still won't advertise.

Yet, national figures and Nobel Prize winners have lent their names and faces, sometimes creating a sensation. In 1976, then-presidential candidate Jimmy Carter shocked many in the country when he confessed in a Playboy interview that he'd looked on "a lot of women with lust" and "committed adultery" in his heart many times.

Carter's appearance in Playboy shouldn't be surprising because the magazine is often seen as an effective channel to a liberal audience, Arthur Kretchmer, Playboy editorial director, said.

Playboy has been a voice of the left in other ways, crusading for civil rights, the Equal Rights Amendment and a woman's right to an abortion. It challenged sex laws and drug laws. It spoke out against the Vietnam War. And it regarded itself as a reflection of the changing times.

"You can't say Playboy led the sexual revolution," Lehrman, who joined the magazine 20 years ago, said.

"It was a mirror and a voice."

Student Pays Tuition With Baseball Cards

by Eric Waldron

Dressed casually in faded blue jeans and a burgundy and blue plaid flannel shirt, Steve Meyer talks freely about the love of his life — baseball. To be more specific, baseball cards. The blond-haired, green-eyed baseball card collector believes the public's interest in baseball hasn't declined. He's proving his assumption by putting himself through college selling bubble gum cards bearing pictures of the sport's heroes.

DALE'S WORLD

You might say Steve is playing his cards right by investing in something he says is better than municipal bonds, treasury bills or even gold. Not only that, but it comes with free bubble gum and the minimum investment is a quarter. Steve, a 21-year-old resident of Napoleon, Ohio, and a junior sports management major at the University, is banking on baseball cards that are craved by collectors as a good investment.

"I collected them as a little kid, but I never knew they were worth so much money," he said. "Some of these cards are worth hundreds of dollars and it really helps pay the cost of school."

AND THE good ones don't come cheap. Take a Willie Mays card for example. The 1955 card from when Mays was an outfielder for the New York Giants is valued by collectors at $80. A 1955 Duke Snider, then a Brooklyn Dodgers outfielder, is worth $50.

But how does somebody get hooked on baseball cards? Steve said he got started one day when a classified advertisement in The Sporting News caught his attention.

"I was looking through the paper when I saw ads in which people were buying and selling the cards. The rest is history," he said.

And the rest is history. Steve has a wealth of baseball history stored in an empty bedroom at home. There he has about 110,000 cards stored carefully in aging, cardboard shoe boxes. An orderly file is kept for easy access to information on many of the cards. Of the 110,000, about 10,000 are from before 1970, he said. Older cards are usually worth more, but there are exceptions.

"IN 1981, one of the newer companies printed a card with Graig Nettles incorrectly printed as Craig Nettles," Steve said. "For a new card, that one's worth some money, about $10." He added that the older cards still seem to attract the most attention. The 1955 Topps lineup of 210 baseball players in mint condition is valued at $550.

The cards Steve treasures most are kept between sheets of plexiglass in the bedroom/baseball hall of fame. As in coin collecting, the condition of the card can mean the difference between a few dollars and a few hundred. Steve uses precaution to keep his prizes in the best possible condition.

From casual collection, Steve has become a baseball card dealer. He attends shows and conventions featuring the cards and distributes price lists about three times a year to more than 100 regular customers. He also monitors magazines such as the Sports Collectors Digest and Card Prices Update that list the going prices for superstars like Pete Rose or Johnny Bench.

"THERE'S ONE card that is extremely valuable, worth so much that only a few books even list it," Steve said. On that card an old-time player named Honus Wagner, of the Pittsburgh Pirates is shown. The problem was that the card was distributed with cigarettes.

According to Steve, Wagner didn't smoke and didn't like the idea of his picture in a pack of smokes so only 10 or 15 were printed, making them worth more money.

The future of baseball card collecting looks promising with card enthusiasts searching for cards both old and new. Upcoming stars like Cal Ripken Jr., Andre Dawson and Dale Murphy will continue to create interest in this relatively unknown hobby.

Although some people may call him a baseball card fanatic, Steve Meyer is a winner in this card game. You could say he knows "the tricks of the trade."

The Tommy Guns work out in their new practice room, a "crazy old building" in downtown Toledo.

The Rock Don't Stop Here

Story By Teresa Perretti
Photos by James Youll

To succeed in most jobs you have to start at the bottom to get to the top, and the record business is no exception. We've all heard the stories of famous bands that began their careers in small, out of the way clubs, only to be discovered by someone who instantly molds them into stars. The Beatles, The Rolling Stones and The Kinks are all examples of struggling groups who made it big by beginning at the bottom.

The Tommy Guns, a five-man Toledo band, is just beginning their struggle to the top. The struggle begins with practice five nights a week in an old building on Lafayette and St. Clair

Members of the band line up as if on stage to work through a set.

Streets in downtown Toledo. All five members split the $75 a month rental charge.

"We wanted to get out of the basement and do some serious practicing," David said.

The band consists of Mark Van Winkle, lead singer, and Jeff Christ, bass player and back-up vocalist, both former members of a band called the London Boys; two former members of the Nu-Tones, David Agosti, lead guitarist and vocalist and his twin brother and drummer for the band, Doug Agosti, who is a former member of The Edge, and John Watkins, lead guitarist.

ALL FIVE are native Toledoans and attend the University of Toledo, with the exception John who is a senior environmental specialist major at the University.

"Having other things in your life to occupy your time is important not only for yourself but also for the group. Being together all the time isn't good for relations," Watkins said.

Besides writing some original music, David writes and edits films at UT. "I'm interested in making some video tapes of the band, this could get us more coverage," he said.

Brother Doug, however, prefers sound to video and is a disc jockey on WERC, Toledo's campus radio station. He is a junior respiratory therapy major.

Jeff, a pre-law major, also works as a draftsman designing houses "and bombshelters." "I'm interested in philosophy and theology, I think this comes out in some of my music," he said in jest.

"My type of music stems from the Rolling Stones, The Romantics and 50s style," Mark, a sophomore communication major and MTV fan said.

BESIDES BEING a full-time student here at the University, Watkins is a member of the environmental club. "In the future I'd like to work out west for the Sierra Club," he said.

The future looks different in the eyes of each member of the band. "My major goal for the band is to accomplish mass popularity, a recording contract and our own time on American Bandstand," Doug said.

"I'd like the band to get out of Toledo, start playin' on the road. Start producing viable LP's," David said.

John is a little bit more realistic than the other members. "In a few years I'd like to see us writing more of our own music, recording it and playing it locally. I think it is important that we get accepted on the local level, there might be a chance that we can break nationally but we have to be realistic," he said.

The last two members of the band have something different in mind. "I want to have fame, fortune and a limo," Mark said. "I'd like to earn $500 a week at least," Jeff said.

Presently the band earns only $200 a night, though, as is average for a bar band. They say they usually end up with about $20 a piece. "Our overhead: truck and sound equipment rental, guitar strings and picks usually eat a lot of the money up," Dave Agosti said.

AS THE lead singer in the Tommy Guns, Mark seems to get most of the attention when they play.

"Before I play I get a natural high. When I hit the stage, it's like everything you always wanted—a movie star, rock star all rolled into one. I don't really look at it as a glamorous thing though, first you have to win over the crowd," Mark said.

Glamour and glitz is something the Tommy Guns feel they can do without. "Unlike a lot of the bands that are popular today, we have cut the glitz and glamour," David said. A more down to earth approach is what they feel they have. "We're not trying to be something we're not," he said.

The music style of the band reflects this realistic approach. "We are not Top 40 or new wave, more like borderline radio-rock without the Top 49 tagged on. Pop Power," John said.

Some of the musical styles most admired and weaved into their performances are The Beatles, The Rolling Stones, The Romantics, The Cars and U2. "New music dominates now," Doug said.

Aside from the fun the band says they have when playing music, they also say a lot of sweat goes into a performance. "A lot of people think playing in a band is easy, but it takes a lot of hard work and devotion. Most of all you have to have respect for the other members, and their musical tastes," Doug said.

As the music seeps through the cracks in the walls of the old building in a less than desirable part of Toledo, it would seem this band does have that communication and devotion. Five bold words painted in black on the back of the door seem to sum up the band's hopes for success "The Rock Don't Stop Here."

Singer Mark Van Winkle takes a look at lyric sheets while practicing his moves at a recent practice session.

Home Away From Home Can Be Overdone

by Scott Raymond Carpenter
Friday Editor

Did you ever wonder who the hell those people on the highway are that drive a 4,000 square foot mobile home with mopeds strapped to the bumpers, a kayak tied to the roof, TV antennas (with little flags flying from them) on the mirrors and a four-wheel-drive, pop-up roof van painted with the same brown stripes trailing behind? (You really should.) There's usually some asinine sign hanging off the back of the monster that says something ridiculously cute like Chester's Chambers or Daddy's Aphrodisiac or something like that.

I don't know if anybody else has considered this, but don't you suppose this guy probably has a '67 Fleetwood in his driveway at home with curb feelers on all four tire wells and fuzzy stuff on the mirror and steering wheel?

I can understand the urge to wallow in the pines and frolic with the raccoons, I guess, but if you're going to take the entire house with you, for Christ's sake, what's the purpose? Why not just stay home and paint ferns on the shades or buy a hamster.

Where do these people go with these things? What fun is there in moving your home from one place to another? How can anyone shower in one of those tiny stalls? And don't you hate it when someone rambles on and on and asks questions you don't even want to read, much less answer?

Well listen, let's get down to some serious BS here. Mobile homes are for wimps and shouldn't be allowed on the interstates. Let's talk about what you should do on vacation.

• Go far away. Preferably another country but Canton will serve the same purpose. Don't go to Arizona. Sure the weather is fine and the cacti pretty, but who lives in Arizona? People with arthritis. Try finding a tennis partner, huh?

• As the Ohio weather quickly goes to pot, remember when making travel plans that everybody is going to Florida. Think. Fairbanks could be your best dollar value this time of the year.

• If you're going to go for the in-the-wilderness crap, for God's sake do it right. Don't wimp out and take flashlights and coolers and sterno cans. Eat off the land (clean it first), rub sticks together and keep the beer cool by digging pits.

• Spend money. It's your vacation and you shouldn't have to do anything but enjoy. Pay someone to park the car, to walk the dog and to floss for you.

• Consider taking a boat, train, plane, car or bus. Don't walk. This is especially important to keep in mind if you're going to Europe for two weeks.

Whatever. Just enjoy. If you like to drink, drink. If you like to swim, swim, if you like to ski, ski. If you like to travel in mobile homes, though, don't. It ruins everything and people like me will run you off the road.

(Look. If you can do better, try. I think this story hangs together well considering the amount of drugs involved in its conception.)

Nielson Ratings

NBC's Sole Winner Becomes A Runaway Hit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's "The A-Team," the third-place network's only hit, ran off with first place in the Nielsen ratings for the week ended Nov. 27 while CBS and ABC were locked in battle for the network standings.

CBS regained first place in the weekly network averages after losing the week before to ABC's highly rated movie about a nuclear holocaust, "The Day After." ABC came in second for the week.

CBS got a boost from a powerhouse package of regular series, including "60 Minutes," which came in second, and "Dallas," which was third.

The third and final chapter of NBC's "Kennedy," a miniseries about the presidential years of John F. Kennedy, was fourth in the Top 10, and the "Second Chapter" was sixth. The opening episode fell before the ratings power of ABC's "The Day After."

The ABC theatrical movie "Stripes," in which Bill Murray battles the Army, came in fifth for the week. "Dynasty," ABC's prime-time soap opera rival to "Dallas" was seventh. In eighth place was the spillover into prime time of CBS' regional NFL football games. CBS' "Falcon Crest" was ninth and "Simon & Simon" was tenth.

CBS won the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey with a network average of 17.1. ABC was second with 16.8 and NBC was third with 16.4. The networks say this means in an average prime-time minute 17.1 percent of the nation's TV households were tuned to CBS.

CBS thus maintained its lead in the season-to-date averages and in the November sweeps.

NBC's "First Camera" was the lowest-rated show of the week, and once again the five lowest shows were all on NBC.

Here are the week's top 20 programs:

1. "The A-Team," NBC, a rating of 27.1 or 22.7 million households.
2. "60 Minutes," CBS, 26.4 or 22.1 million.
3. "Dallas," CBS, 25.3 or 21.2 million.
4. Miniseries - "Kennedy," Part III, NBC, 24.3 or 20.4 million.
5. Movie - "Stripes," ABC, 24.0 or 20.1 million.
6. Miniseries - "Kennedy," Part II, NBC, 22.3 or 18.7 million.
7. "Dynasty," ABC, 21.3 or 17.8 million.
8. CBS NFL Football, CBS, 21.2 or 17.7 million.
9. "Falcon Crest," CBS, 21.1 or

17.6 million.

10. "Simon & Simon," CBS, 20.8 or 17.4 million.

11. "Hotel," ABC, 19.9 or 16.7 million.

12. "The Love Boat," ABC, 19.6 or 16.4 million.

13. "AfterM*A*S*H*," CBS, 19.5 or 16.3 million.

14. Movie - "Fort Apache, The Bronx," NBC, 19.3 or 16.2 million.

15. "Three's Company," ABC, 19.2 or 16.1 million.

16. "Knots Landing," CBS, 18.9 or 15.8 million.

17. "Dukes of Hazzard," CBS, 18.7 or 15.7 million.

18. "Newhart," CBS, 18.6 or 15.6 million.

19. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 18.2 or 15.2 million.

20. "That's Incredible," ABC, 17.9

U2 Live, Yes Reincarnated: Both Winning LPs

YES — 90125 (Atlantic)

As with 1980's Drama, before discussing the music here it's more important to first look at the box score — the quintet of musicians now calling themselves Yes.

by Fats Miller
Entertainment Editor

Supporting the current lineup is the band's longtime rhythm section — Alan White (drums) and co-founder Chris Squire (bass, vocals). Not only have their innovative contributions fueled the volatile British combo for the last ten years, but they are also the only remaining members from the Drama LP and tour. In the crucial keyboard slot we find the surprising return of Tony Kaye, another original Yesman who departed after the group's first two LPs and has done little of note since.

Although Kaye's synthesizer work may pale in comparison with his replacements/predecessors — Rick Wakeman, Patrick Moraz (Moody Blues), Geoff Downes (Asia, ex-Buggles) — the largest chore personnel-wise is undertaken by guitarist Trevor Rabin, who fills the shoes left empty by axemaster Steve Howe. In fact, when Howe joined Asia it appeared Yes had called it quits for good.

Actually, the above quartet of current Yesfolks — White, Squire, Kaye, Rabin — spent much of 1983 rehearsing and recording under the moniker of "Sinema" (the title of a sparkling instrumental that opens side 2 of 90125). But with the subsequent inclusion of vocalist/co-founder Jon Anderson, the project became... once again... Yes (with Anderson co-writing seven of this record's nine tracks). The producer? Another surprise, it's Trevor Horn, the ex-Bugle who handled Drama's lead vocals.

Now that you've got all that straight, considerations of what's in the grooves should make a lot more sense. 90125 lacks the magic and undeniable sense of power that has characterized Yes (except for their fledgling early efforts and 1978's lackluster Tormato, which featured both Howe and Wakeman). Forgetting for a moment that we're talking about Yes, though, 90125 (the record's catalog number) is one of the better records released during the last few months.

The record kicks off with the engaging "Owner Of A Lonely Heart," the most unabashedly accessible tune the band has ever written. Its power-chord intro, Policeisms, infectious chorus and gangster movie sound effects make it instantly likeable and hummable, though never quite crossing the line into crass commercialism.

From there it's a mixed bag of material that attempts to strike the unlikely balance between musical attitudes reflecting where the band's been and where they're headed here. As with Genesis and Asia, swatches of true progressiveness only surface in spots, most notably on the LP's stunning seven-minute closing track, "Hearts." Elsewhere, within the confines of shorter tracks, Yes struggles to reconcile formulaic song structures with more adventurous aural strategies.

Ultimately, the strength of each piece depends more on its compositional merits or flaws than on Yes' trademark instrumental flash. "Leave It," with Rabin on lead vocals, features the spry and intricate vocal arrangements that distinguished earlier classics such as "I've Seen All Good People." "Hold On" sounds tired and uninspired. "City Of Love" and "Changes" manage to effectively combine some eclectic musical elements with more standard rock motifs.

Lyricaly, there are few departures from the group's traditional complexity of ideas. Though somewhat more down to earth than in the past, Yes' lyrics remain either insightful or just plain silly, depending on the listener's disposition toward the band.

Overall, once you get beyond worrying about whether progressive rock is dead or not (which it is, by the way), and the fact that Yes' truly groundbreaking work is well behind them, 90125's humble virtues do step forward. Purists may claim the music to be little more than faint echoes of the coffin lid being slammed shut years ago — their cries expressing both disappointment and scorn. But within the current socio-cultural milieu, the LP succeeds on too many levels to be so easily dismissed.

U2 — Under A Blood Red Sky (Island)

How does a band live up to the much levied tag of "the band of the 80s?" U2 is one outfit that is more concerned with producing vital music than dealing with that expression of public and critical affection. Recorded during this year's War tour, the 8-song "mini-LP" both supports the above claim and captures much of the excitement of the band on stage.

Though live LPs have become largely unobtrusive obligations for many bands in recent years, U2 takes the opportunity to substitute headlong bravado, spontaneity and improvisation for the polish of their studio work. The band chooses to embellish rather than simply rehash the recorded versions of these songs, with every track standing proudly on its own.

In addition to rousing renditions of "New Year's Day," "I Will Follow," "Sunday Bloody Sunday" and "Gloria," the record's real tour de force is "11 O'clock Tick Tock." Recorded prior to their debut LP, Boy, and previously available only as an import single, the song has been a well-received concert staple since this Irish quartet first hit these shores more than three years ago. This scathing live version showcases one of rock's most innovative guitarists, the Edge, including his thrashing two-chord solo and the tune's climactic five note run.

Two of Sky's other most impressive moments are even a bit more unexpected. They are the tagged-on intro to "The Electric Co." (from Boy), with its interplay between Bono's ad-libbed vocal and the Edge's scruffy, reverbed chording (the latter borrowed from October's "Is That All") and Bono's scat singing to the Edge's solo during the acoustic "Party Girl" (previously available only as an import). Thankfully, this record is not an exhaustive greatest hits package. While some of their best concert material has been excluded, the other non-"hit" tracks — those mentioned above plus "40" (from War) — are able to keep the band's high level of intensity flowing.

After the startling sentiments of War, it would be easy to brand U2 an important political new wave band. Yet their reach and influence stretch well beyond one single outlook. While their undeniable idealism shines through the entire range of topics covered on this live disc, the record proves them to be a rock and roll band with few peers. Their rare sense of musical integrity is heard in conjunction with a flawless grasp of rhythm and melody. This is further matched with a sense of conviction about their music that makes U2 and Under A Blood Red Sky truly inspiring.
